About Us

The Soka Gakkai is a community-based Buddhist organization that promotes peace, culture and education centered on respect for the dignity of life. Its organizational roots date back to 1930, when first president Tsunesaburo Makiguchi and second president Josei Toda founded the forerunner of the Soka Gakkai. In 1960, Daisaku Ikeda became the third president at the time of the emergence of a growing membership around the world, and the Soka Gakkai International (SGI) was formed in 1975 with Ikeda as its president.

Soka Gakkai members uphold the humanistic philosophy of Nichiren Buddhism in 192 countries and territories around the world. Individual Soka Gakkai members strive to actualize their inherent potential while contributing as empowered global citizens to their local communities and responding to the shared issues facing humankind. The Soka Gakkai's efforts to help build a lasting culture of peace are based on a commitment to dialogue and nonviolence, and the understanding that individual happiness and the realization of a peaceful world are inextricably linked.

As a nongovernmental organization with formal ties to the United Nations, the SGI also collaborates with other civil society organizations, intergovernmental agencies and faith groups in the fields of nuclear disarmament, human rights education, sustainable development and humanitarian relief.

Three Founding Presidents and the History of the Soka Gakkai

First President Tsunesaburo Makiguchi www.tmakiguchi.org

Tsunesaburo Makiguchi (1871–1944) was a geographer, educational theorist and religious reformer.

As an educator, Makiguchi was devoted to the happiness of children and worked to ensure that economically disadvantaged children were given equal opportunities. In 1928, he was introduced to Nichiren Buddhism, finding in it a holistic philosophy that accorded with his own thinking. On November 18, 1930, he published The System of Value-Creating Pedagogy. This date marks the founding of the Soka Kyoiku Gakkai (Value-Creating Education Society), the forerunner of the Soka Gakkai.

The organization initially consisted of teachers promoting educational reform guided by Makiguchi's ideas and his belief in happiness as the core objective of education. Over time, it developed into a broader-based movement focused on the practice of Nichiren Buddhism and its philosophy of empowerment. During World War II, Makiguchi and his protégé Josei Toda were imprisoned by the military government for resisting state control of religion. Makiguchi died in prison without ever having compromised his beliefs.

Second President Josei Toda www.joseitoda.org

Josei Toda (1900–58) was a school teacher and protégé of Tsunesaburo Makiguchi. In 1930, Makiguchi and Toda founded the Soka Kyoiku Gakkai (Value-Creating Education Society), whose original aim was to promote Makiguchi's educational theories. Toda was imprisoned along with Makiguchi during World War II for opposing Japan's militarist government.

Upon release from prison at the end of the war, Toda set out to rebuild the organization, renaming it the Soka Gakkai (Society for the Creation of Value), reflecting a commitment to realizing global peace and empowering individuals through Buddhist practice. As second president, he developed the organization into one of Japan's most significant lay Buddhist associations.

Toda coined the term "human revolution" to express the central idea of Nichiren Buddhism—that an individual's inner transformation positively transforms their circumstances and their environment. He advocated a vision of global citizenship and, in 1957, issued a historic declaration calling for the abolition of nuclear weapons. By the time of his death at the age of 58, he had built an organization of nearly one million members.

Third President Daisaku Ikeda Current president of the Soka Gakkai International www.daisakuikeda.org

Daisaku Ikeda was born in 1928. As a teenager, he experienced the horrors of World War II, which fueled his lifelong commitment to peace. At 19, he met Josei Toda, who became his mentor.

Ikeda became the third president of the Soka Gakkai in 1960, leadina its international development. In 1975, he founded the Soka Gakkai International (SGI), now a worldwide association in 192 countries and territories. He has also founded cultural, educational and peace-related institutions including an educational system with universities in Japan and the USA. Ikeda is a prolific author. His works include discourses on Buddhism, essays, poetry and children's literature. He has published dialogues with leaders, cultural figures and scholars from around the world discussing ways of resolving the common challenges facing humanity.

Since 1983, he has written annual peace proposals that examine the interrelation between core Buddhist concepts and key global issues. As leader of the SGI, he has inspired grassroots efforts for a nuclear-weapon-free world and continues to explore viable routes toward nuclear abolition.

ARNOLD TOYNBEE & DAISAKU IKEDA

with Arnold J.Toynbee, British historian

This is the record of a thought-provoking discussion between an eminent historian Arnold J. Toynbee (1889–1975), raised in the Judeo-Christian tradition and well-known for his work A Study of History, and Daisaku Ikeda, an influential Buddhist leader of Japan. At the invitation of Toynbee, who was deeply interested in Eastern philosophy and Buddhism, Ikeda visited his home in London in 1972 and 1973 and engaged in a series of dialogues to discuss an array of problems facing humanity. This book documents their discussions, which spanned a total of 40 hours over two years.

APPENDIX P70

Despite the authors' differences of cultural and religious backgrounds, they agree that religion is the mainspring of human life and civilization. In order to find answers and solutions to the acute problems facing mankind around the world, they say, it is imperative that human beings' egoism—the innate tendency of humans to exploit the universe—has to be overcome. Expanding an individual self into the universal self or the ultimate reality is the only way to overcome egoism and the only means of social betterment.

This volume covers a number of issues ranging from specific to global and transcends generations—perennial problems of human nature and our relationship to other creatures, the environment and the universe.

BUDDHIST VIEW OF LIFE

DAISAKU IKEDA

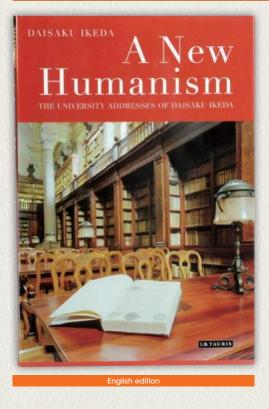

Buddhism started with Shakyamuni's realization that birth, aging, sickness and death are universal sufferings that all human beings are destined to face. They are usually considered to be factors that lead to our unhappiness and tend to be resented. While many schools of Buddhism teach that there can be no true happiness or enlightenment without eliminating earthly desires, Nichiren Buddhism recognizes that some desires create value, and that desires based on truth rather than delusion can even lead to enlightenment. Ikeda delves into each of the four sufferings and offers insight on how these unavoidable sufferings can be transformed into sources of wisdom and personal fulfillment.

A New Humanism: The University Addresses of Daisaku Ikeda

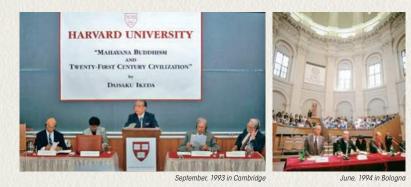

Chinese (Traditional), English, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Malay, Spanish, Thai

Ikeda has given speeches at more than 30 universities, research institutes and academies throughout the world. He has spoken on art, literature and education; the many aspects and dimensions of culture; religion and our time; and, perhaps dearest to his heart, the imperative of peace. These talks have been presented at a wide range of institutions: Harvard University, Moscow State University, the University of Bologna, Peking University, the University of California at Los Angeles, the Brazilian Academy of Letters and L'Institut de France, among others. In all of these speeches, Ikeda reaches out to build bridges of friendship, understanding and communication with people everywhere. He does this not by insisting on his own position, but by exploring the legacy that the great thinkers and doers of humanity have left to us, highlighting the beliefs and achievements of other great individuals, and introducing them to his listeners. In this way he has been able not only to connect to audiences across the globe but to expand their horizons and encourage them to seek further on their own.

A LIFELONG Quest for Peace

Linus Pauling and Daisaku Ikeda

LB.TAURIS

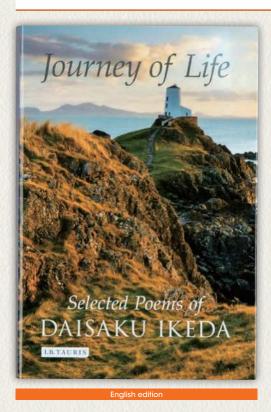

with Linus Pauling, Nobel Chemistry and Peace Laureate

America's premier scientist and peace activist Linus Pauling (1901-94) and Daisaku Ikeda worked for decades in the cause of disarmament, international understanding and world peace. A timely publication at a critical juncture in world affairs, this book is the product of their discussions held at SULA (a branch of Soka University in Los Angeles) in 1987. While the dialogue spells out their efforts and prescriptions for dealing with current crises, it also recounts Pauling's recollections of his childhood, his development as a scientist, and many episodes about his life and the people he has known—Albert Einstein and Robert Oppenheimer among them. This volume gives a broad and personal glimpse of Pauling, recipient of two unshared Nobel Prizes (for chemistry in 1954 and for peace in 1962). The authors, active and vocal in their advocacy of responsible and humane progress in science, send their inspiring messages to young people, on whose shoulders the problems of the 21st century rest.

Journey of Life: Selected Poems of Daisaku Ikeda

English

Since his youth, Ikeda has written countless poems covering a variety of subjects—sometimes encouraging friends who are struggling, sometimes thinking about world peace. This collection features 50 poems composed between 1945 and 2007 including: "Blossoms that scatter" (1947), written when Ikeda was seventeen; "Daybreak" (1966), one of a handful of poems published during the 1960s; and "August 15—The dawn of a new day" (2001), one of the more than 200 long-form poems composed between 2000 and 2006. Ikeda has dedicated himself to restoring the poetic heart and mind among individuals. In each poem, Ikeda demonstrates unwavering conviction and trust in humanity and offers inspiration for nurturing a humanistic global culture.

Mother awaits the revival of those healthful days when as children, eyes brimming with pristine tears, we rested in her embrace; the peaceful cradled nights when she performed her soul songs for us, as we dreamed with easy breath and ventured through fabled gardens...

DAISAKU I K E D A

Originally published in 2001 under the title, Soka Education, and revised in 2010, The Light of Learning contains a new title, six new works, and revised translations to better reflect what Prof. Jason Goulah in the foreword calls Mr. Ikeda's "uniquely Eastern and quintessentially universal" perspectives and practices in education. Ranging from educational proposals and university lectures to personal essays and poetry, the writings included in The Light of Learning provide a comprehensive introduction to Mr. Ikeda's broad educational philosophy. Updated translations center on key terms and concepts that animate Mr. Ikeda's singular contributions to the field.

Reviews

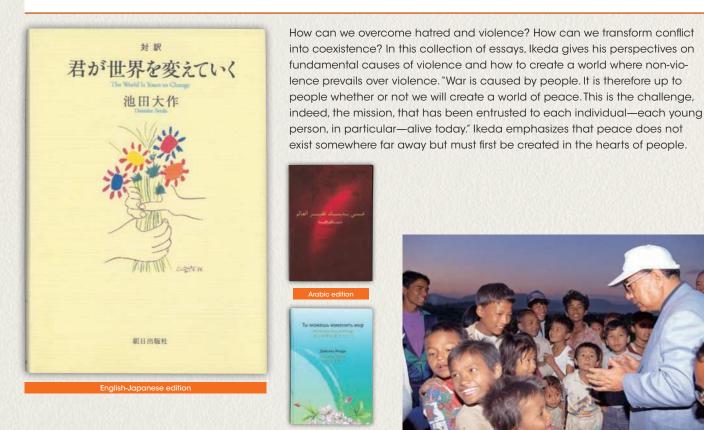

The writings in this volume are compelling and encouraging, a necessary guide in the uncertainty of our turbulent times and the urgency of the moment. They will resonate with all readers, whether scholar or practitioner, initiated or new to Ikeda's work. Embodying his characteristic commitment to penetrating dialogue, they are ultimately an invitation to all of us to imagine possibility in the given, create value in our rationality, and to know others and ourselves and become truly human.

Discussions on Youth

Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), Dutch, English, French, German, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Lao, Portuguese, Spanish, Thai

While giving advice on the things that young people worry about, such as friendship, love and work, this book's comments on history, literature and the arts encourage us to think about what it means to live as a person of the 21st century. American high schools have welcomed it for classroom use for the hints given by Ikeda—a man who has conducted dialogues on various topics with prominent writers, thinkers, artists and scholars around the world—to the question of "how we should live."

Philosophy, Psychology and Religion

"The true and overriding task of religion is to empower people to exercise control over the heart and mind, enabling us to find in differences the rich value of uniqueness and diversity—to transform differences into a source of value creation. I believe what is required of a world religion today is to help bring about a revival in human values by firmly focusing on the eternal and the universal. A religion that embraces diversity as a defining quality of life will hail difference for its ability to enrich society and will engender the wisdom to employ that diversity to create maximum value."

Reflections on the Global Civilization

Arabic, Chinese (Traditional), Dutch, English, French, Hebrew, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Malay, Persian, Thai

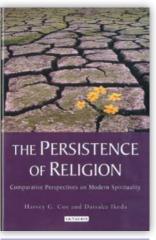

with Majid Tehranian, University of Hawaii

Reflections on the Global Civilization emerged from a series of conversations between global peace advocates lkeda and Tehranian (1937–2012), respectively of Japanese and Iranian origin. It covers the encounters between Buddhist and Islamic civilizations from the 7th century to the present. Despite all their cultural differences, Buddhism and Islam share a surprising number of intrinsic similarities. Now more than ever, the search for common ground across civilizations is of vital importance. The topics discussed include the nature of religious faith today, global ideological terrorism, religious fanaticism and universal human rights. The authors propose dialogue as the most effective method of conflict resolution in interpersonal, intranational and international communication.

The Persistence of Religion: Comparative Perspectives on Modern Spirituality

Chinese (Traditional), English, French, Japanese, Korean, Vietnamese

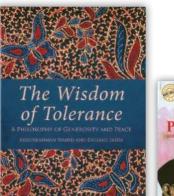

English edition

with Harvey G. Cox, Harvard University

Despite the heavy reliance on science and technology in the contemporary world, religion still persists today. Religious extremism and intolerance, however, have caused conflicts and even led to terrorism in some cases. What role, then, can religion play in today's world of unprecedented cultural diversity? Cox, Hollis Research Professor of Divinity at the Harvard Divinity School, and Ikeda emphasize the importance of questioning, discussing and learning from each other with open-mindedness. Exchanging views on a wide range of topics including non-violence, the Internet society, nuclear abolition and university education, the authors provide insight into how religion can contribute to creating a world of respect for humanity and a peaceful society.

The Wisdom of Tolerance: A Philosophy of Generosity and Peace

Arabic, Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), English, French, Indonesian, Japanese, Malay

Indonesian edition

with Abdurrahman Wahid, former President of Indonesia

This is an engrossing interfaith dialogue between Islam and Buddhism by two great religious leaders. Wahid (1940-2009) served as President of Indonesia from 1999 to 2001 and assumed leadership of the Nahdlatul Ulama, one of the largest independent Islamic organizations in the world. Wahid and Ikeda, despite their different religious backgrounds, are both open to each other and set an inspiring example of how a dialogue for peace can be conducted. Their candid exchange shows it is possible for people to work together for peace while overcoming differences in culture and religious faith.

This series of conversations includes discussions on the origins of religious sentiment in people as well as how it takes form in society, and the spiritual, moral and political impact religion has on our personal lives. Their stimulating discourse on medicine and its relation to religion are of great interest in light of the recent discoveries of the close connection between mental and physical health.

New Horizons in Eastern Humanism: Buddhism, Confucianism and the Quest for Global Peace

Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), English, Japanese

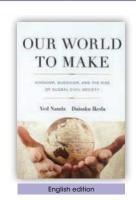

with Tu Weiming, Harvard University

Confucian philosophy is thousands of years old. The principles of Buddhist humanism are also expansive enough to embrace the entire cosmos. In this book, the authors investigate common features shared by Confucianism and Buddhism to explore how Oriental humanism can help avert the crises facing humankind today. A world authority on Chinese philosophy, Tu expresses his earnest desire that established civilizations become not only teachers, but students as well. Ikeda, who has firmly advocated amity between China and Japan, insists that building a global society where different cultures with different value systems respect and listen to each other is crucial in bringing a culture of peace into full flower.

Walking with the Mahatma: Gandhi for Modern Times

Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), English, Japanese, Malayalam, Tamil

English edition

with Neelakanta Radhakrishnan, chairman of the Indian Council of Gandhian Studies in India

Radhakrishnan, director of the memorial center Gandhi Smriti and Darshan Samiti in India, is one of the leading figures in the study of Mahatma Gandhi. Radhakrishnan and Ikeda discuss how the non-violence philosophy can contribute to solving problems facing humanity today, examining Gandhi's non-violence movement and how it affected the peace and human rights movement around the world and tracing the origin of the non-violence philosophy back to Shakyamuni and King Ashoka.

Ethics & Humanity

"The spirit of self-regulation begins to operate when we realize that we exist because others do and feel concern for our surroundings, including other people. Neglecting self-regulation and insisting on one's own rights alone destroys the environment on which we depend, thus engendering our own continued existence. This is why cultivation of a total human being capable of self-regulation and caring for others is indispensable to creating a century of human rights.

"As I mentioned earlier, Nichiren wrote that 'the varied sufferings that all living beings undergo—all these are Nichiren's own sufferings.' This spirit of compassion and sympathy is the wellspring of the SGI movement and should form the foundation of the human rights philosophy of the twenty-first century."

AGING

with Mikhail Gorbachev, former President of the Soviet Union

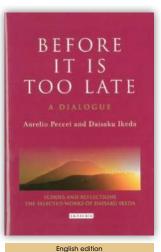

Since their first encounter in 1990, Mikhail Gorbachev (1931-2022), the former president of the Soviet Union, and Ikeda have continued their exchange through meetings and correspondence. Through their experiences of life amidst the turmoil of the 20th century, they share the belief that wars and violence cannot be justified for any reason, and that peace, progress and social justice can only be achieved through sincere communication and cultural exchange. The reader will be fascinated to find out that the two authors—representatives of Marxism and Buddhism respectively—delve into a discussion of the human spirit from within, on the shared idea of and trust in human beings.

For many people, retirement now marks a new beginning, sometimes referred to as the "third stage of life." As the elderly population increases, the question of how to live a truly happy, fulfilling life after retirement has become the foremost health question. It is also necessary to build a society where people show respect for their elders. In this dialogue, lkeda discusses key issues for leading a fulfilling life during one's later years and explores topics such as maintaining ones' health, caring for the elderly, and the secrets of living a long life from the point of view of Buddhist humanism.

Unger, president of the European Academy of Sciences and Arts, is concerned that violence and terrorism have become more widespread these days and maintains that materialistic values have expanded while humanistic values have diminished. Unger and Ikeda emphasize a humanistic perspective centered on the values of tolerance, compassion and dialogue, an approach that can overcome the negative consequences of materialism, nationalism and the market economy. Their discussion also includes the significance of intercultural and interfaith dialogue, the relationship between human beings and spirit, as well as society and non-human nature.

Buddhism & Buddhist Studies

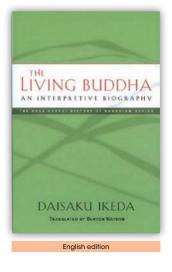

"Buddhism, as it travelled west beyond the borders of India, exerted an influence upon Greek thought and the teachings of early Christianity. And moving east, it entered into a dialogue with the age-old culture of China, resulting in time in the formation of what we call Chinese Buddhism. Interacting in a sincere and responsible way with the earlier teachings of Confucianism and Taoism, it established a place in Chinese society, and in the principle known as 'three thousand realms in a single moment of life,' propounded by the T'ien-t'ai school of Buddhism, made a brilliant contribution to the history of world philosophy.

"Japan in the thirteenth century saw the appearance of one of the most commanding figures of human history, Nichiren, who, basing himself on the Lotus Sutra and the teachings of the T'ien-t'ai school, expounded a type of Buddhism that sought to promote the happiness of the populace and the advancement of world peace."

Books on Buddhist Perspectives

The Living Buddha: An Interpretive Biography

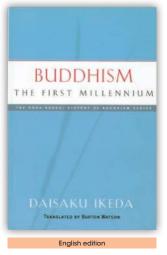

Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), Danish, English, French, German, Greek, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, Russian, Serbian, Sinhalese, Spanish, Swedish, Thai, Vietnamese

Unlike other major world religions, Buddhism depends on neither divine revelation nor an incarnation of God. Shakyamuni, the historical Buddha, was a man who attained enlightenment through his own efforts. As a biography of Shakyamuni, The Living Buddha is a vivid historical narrative based on what is known or what can reasonably be surmised about his life and times. It leads the reader through the journey Shakyamuni Buddha, a human being, underwent to create a new spiritual history for humanity, while devoting his life to the pursuit of eternal principles of truth.

Buddhism, The First Millennium

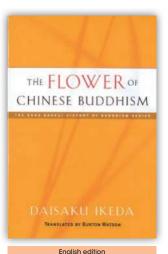

Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), Danish, English, French, German, Greek, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, Serbian, Spanish, Vietnamese

After Shakyamuni's death, his followers established the foundation of Buddhism and spread it beyond India. This happened during a period of uncertainty, in which dissention arose among Shakyamuni's followers and discrepancies over the interpretation of his teachings surfaced. Despite these challenges, Shakyamuni's disciples endeavored to seek the realm of enlightenment that he had attained. Ikeda describes how Buddhism was handed down from one disciple to another and spread from India to other areas, and how the scriptures of Mahayana Buddhism, the Lotus Sutra in particular, were formed. The book also sheds light on historical figures such as King Ashoka, King Milinda and Nagarjuna, who practiced and developed Buddhism.

The Flower of Chinese Buddhism

Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), Danish, English, French, German, Greek, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, Spanish, Thai

Buddhism, which originated and was developed in India, gradually spread to China, a country with a wholly different cultural background. Though the core teachings were preserved, it was not unchanged by the people of China. The process in which new elements and changes were adapted to Buddhism provides a key to understanding some of the characteristics that qualify Buddhism as a world religion. Focusing on the narrative of those Chinese scholars and figures that upheld the Lotus Sutra and established the foundation of Chinese Buddhism, and the Tiantai School in particular, Ikeda offers intriguing insights into how Chinese Buddhism came into full flower.

with Lokesh Chandra, International Academy of Indian Culture

Lokesh Chandra and Daisaku Ikeda explore the wisdom of Oriental philosophies that can transcend superficial differences and unite humanity. Chandra commends Ikeda for reintroducing the Lotus Sutra and its essential teachings to India, as well as the sutra's modern applications. Chandra is a Buddhist scholar and the general director of the International Academy of Indian Culture in New Delhi, India. The academy was founded in 1935 by Raghubira, Chandra's father, to promote understanding of diverse cultures from a Buddhist perspective.

"What does life mean to us?" This fundamental question has been discussed throughout history with no definitive answer. Despite the rapid progress of science and technology, life remains an enigma to most people. In this book, Ikeda discusses how the mystery of life as interpreted by Buddhism is linked with empirical deduction, explaining spatial and temporal aspects of life, self-realization and the Buddhist interpretation of death. Science and Buddhism approach the same questions in different ways and offer distinct answers. Ikeda's analysis of modern science and Buddhism offers an intriguing perspective and draws the reader's attention to their similarities.

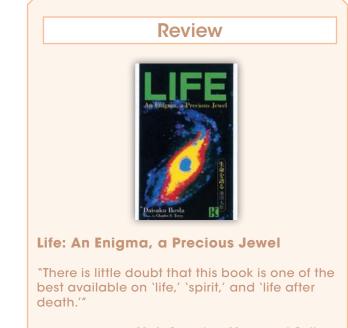

My View on Tiantai

Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), Japanese

Chinese edition

Buddhism, which originated in India, found its way to China and flourished, reflecting the cultural and philosophical features of Chinese society. At the core of Chinese Buddhism can be seen the theoretical system of the Buddhist philosophy of the Tiantai school. Living at the point of contact between ancient Chinese systems of thought and the Buddhist way of thinking, Tiantai successfully developed Chinese Buddhism as a dynamic, unique system of thought. In the stream of Buddhist history, Shakyamuni Buddha set forth the fundamental principles and Tiantai perfected Buddhism as an integrated philosophical theory. Ikeda details the development and progress of Tiantai's Buddhism by vividly describing Tiantai's life and introducing episodes from it.

Nichiren (1222-82) was the founder of the Buddhist tradition based on the Lotus Sutra which advocates chanting the phrase Nam-myoho-renge-kyo as a daily practice. Nichiren taught that this phrase represents the essence of the Lotus's teaching. He embodied it in a mandala called the Gohonzon and taught that chanting the phrase with faith in the Gohonzon enables people in the present age to attain Buddhahood. In order to propagate his teaching and also to encourage his disciples, he wrote many treatises and letters. The Writings of Nichiren Daishonin contains 172 writings by Nichiren, and 234 documents are included in Volume 2.

History & World Affairs

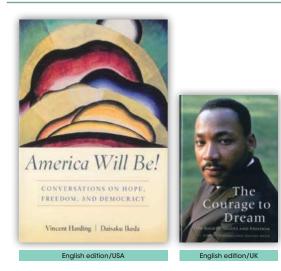

"Though Dr. King is frequently referred to as a leader of the civil rights movement, Professor Harding believes that the term 'civil rights movement' is an inadequate description of the cause to which he and Dr. King dedicated themselves; he suggests instead that it should be seen as a broader 'expansion of democracy.' Many individuals have devoted their blood, sweat, and tears to this movement to expand democracy. We must never forget these unidentified champions, nor the fact that this movement itself is never ending. It is an ongoing effort, to be passed from one generation to the next, from adults to youth, for all eternity.

"This expansion of democracy is not just a matter of changing government policies or something that can be achieved by a select group of political leaders. It can only be accomplished when every individual in society, awakening to their own dignity and worth as well as that of others, stands up to join hands with their fellow citizens to build a better world based on true humanism."

Peace

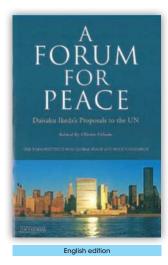

"After World War II, the United Nations was established thanks to people's remorse and awareness that another war would imperil human survival, and their determination to never again allow another such war to take place.

"Whether we can abolish war depends on our ability to create a system where all the human wisdom can be gathered, although the creation of such a system seems cumbersome.

"If war is ever to be abolished, ultimately it will be done by nurturing a "fortress of peace" in people's hearts, and by cultivating the will to live in peace through education, in the broadest sense of the word."

Culture

"In the world at present, where information and capital are rapidly being globalized in nature, there is a strong tendency for Western or European values to become the single standard. At the same time, the countries or local areas that are unable to keep with this tendency are becoming isolated and set apart from the rest of the world because of their differences.

"But any culture, whatever it is, will take on a new shape when it is combined with elements from other and difference cultures. Particularly in our modern age, it is sincere confrontation with the dilemma of whether to become Europeanized or to retain native ways, whether to opt for progress or for tradition, that provides the chief motive power for cultural creation. In this sense, therefore, we should not be unduly alarmed at the prospect of a 'clash of civilizations.' This is especially true for East Asia, which possesses a rich store of wisdom that will enable it to surmount any such clashes."

Education for Creative Living is a translation of notes written over a 30-year period and published in the early 1930s by Japanese educator Tsunesaburo Makiguchi (1871-1944). Through his educational career as an elementary school principle, he presented in this book his innovative pedagogy, which asserted that the purpose of education was to enable students to lead happy lives by fostering a character capable of creating value in their own lives. For Makiguchi, the aim of education was not only to provide students with knowledge and information, but also to enable them to learn by themselves and lead creative lives.

The Illuminating Power of Learning

Chinese (Traditional), Japanese, Russian

with Victor A. Sadovnichy, Moscow State University

Education is not merely a means to benefit society but rather an end in itself—something that gives purpose to human life. This book discusses the meaning of education and how it should function in a globalized world. As the rector of Moscow State University and the founder of Soka University, respectively, Sadovnichy and Ikeda express their expectations for university-level cooperation beyond national boundaries as a mainstay for realizing international education. Touching upon challenges facing university education today and the negative aspects of science, they shed light on the power of culture and religion in building a society that is dedicated to education.

Tsunesaburo Makiguchi, the founder and first president of Soka Gakkai, claimed that education should serve the happiness and welfare of children. Based on this belief, Ikeda has made speeches at some of the world's centers for higher learning for the development of education. He stressed that he considers education to be "the final and most crucially important undertaking of my life." Light of Education is a collection of Ikeda's proposals and speeches on education. Through these lectures and speeches, the paradigm shift that Ikeda has proposed—from looking at "education for society's sake" to "society serving the essential needs of education"-comes to the surface.

"There are many kinds of mountains in this world. There are high mountains and low ones. And there are a great many different kinds of rivers. There are long and short rivers. Despite their differences, however, we cannot dispute that fact that all mountains are mountains and that all rivers are rivers.

"There are serene mountains like the ones in the ancient Japanese capital of Nara, and there are active volcanoes like Mount Aso. Then there are the grand snowcapped peaks of the Himalayas. All of these mountains are beautiful and impressive in their own way.

"The same is so with rivers. There is Japan's Ishikari River, home to magnificent salmon, as well as our poetic Chikuma River. There is the Yellow River in China, and there is the Amazon in South America, rivers so wide that in some places, the opposite shore cannot be seen. Each of them has its own special beauty.

"The same is true of people. Each of you has a unique mission in life. You have a mission that is yours and yours alone. That is an indisputable fact, one in which I would like you to have conviction and pride."

On Women

LANGUAGE APPE Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), Japanese, Korean, Vietnamese

With the firm conviction that women are by nature peace-loving and that the happiest and worthiest way of life is based on true love, Ikeda discusses women's roles in the family, society and the world, and encourages them to challenge any adverse circumstances they may face. As Ikeda writes in the foreword, it is often hard for women to live lives true to themselves while developing what is within, which is most important. Ikeda offers guidelines for women to live not dependent on their husband or other persons but with open minds toward their local community, society and the world.

The entry for February 28, for instance, reads "When our heart and sense of purpose change, everything changes. As we work for the happiness and welfare of others, we enter a path in which our lives come to shine with the greatest possible brilliance." And for May 15: "Forge a solid self and develop within you the power to attract happiness to your life. Then you yourself will be happy and fulfilled, and you will be able to lead your family, your relatives, and your friends to happiness, too."

On Women volume 2

On Happiness

LANGUAGE APPENL Chinese (Simplified and Traditional), Japanese, Lao, Thai

True happiness comes into full flower with perseverance. Happiness attained without persevering through hardships is ephemeral. With this belief, Ikeda has written many essays and poems to encourage those who are facing hardships and challenges. The six poems and 30 essays included in On Happiness are full of warmth and advice on how to attain true happiness. The book is divided into six parts; youth, husband and wife, parent and child, family, the way of life and society. Ikeda's earnest desire to make the 21st century the century of women and peace is consistent throughout the book.

Road to Happiness: Light of Hope, Songs of Joy

Chinese (Traditional), Japanese, Korean

The essays in this book cover topics as varied as friendship, work and dreams, family, the compassion of mothers, the environment, the family budget, bereavement, parental care of adolescents, the husband and wife bond, aging and nursing, health, diet, and more. In each essay, Ikeda provides insights by introducing stories from the lives of individuals with whom he and his wife Kaneko have interacted over the years. He expresses appreciation and respect toward women who live full lives in society despite their difficult situations. Ikeda has an unwavering conviction that women living vigorously with the "treasure of the heart" can lead their family to be happier, society to become more enriched and the world to be more peaceful.

Science

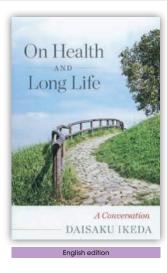

"Many of the threats we face today are actually the results of our science and technology. Environmental pollution, for example, is the result of our relentless pursuit of convenience and affluence, which has blinded us to the self-evident principle that we are part of nature and need to live in harmony with it.... The advancement of modern civilization based on science has exacerbated and amplified the greed for possessions and dominance inherent in human beings, until they are on the verge of destroying our natural environment and threatening life itself.

"In order to prevent further environmental destruction, it is important to have accurate information regarding the actual severity of the threat constantly presented to the public and to take the necessary legal and policy measures to deal with the problem. Not only experts in the field but the general public must constantly be on the alert and monitoring the actions taken by government and business."

On Health and Long Life: A Conversation

Chinese (Traditional), English, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Lao, Thai

Always concerned about the most basic problems confronting humanity, lkeda here once again explores the four universal sufferings of birth, aging, sickness and death. In conversation with doctors and nurses, lkeda skillfully weaves Buddhist insights with the practical knowledge and personal experiences of his dialogue partners. What can we learn from our illnesses? How is the patient's attitude crucial to healing? How do parents affect their children's health? How much are our lives determined by our genes? What are constructive ways to approach aging? What are keys for effective health care? The answers to these and other questions in On Health and Long Life provide valuable perspectives to caring for the most valuable of treasures: our own lives.

Discussions on Health: Buddhism and the Art of Medicine

Chinese (Traditional), English, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese

No treasure is more valuable than good health. According to the WHO definition, "Health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being." As people seek healthier lives, more attention is paid to the mental and social dimensions of health concerns. Buddhism, which originally sought solutions to the universal sufferings of birth, aging, sickness and death, elevates the life force and cultivates wisdom within to utilize medical knowledge to the fullest. In this book, Ikeda discusses with doctors and nurses some of the keys to living a truly fulfilling life—in both body and mind—and offers wisdom for health from both scientific and Buddhist perspectives.

Weizsäcker and Ikeda probe deeply into how to enable humanity to achieve a sustainable global society, shifting away from market fundamentalism and ideologies that exhort the unlimited expansion of market growth at the expense of people and the environment, and instead, toward sufficiency based on efficiency—agreeing not to use more energy, water or minerals while achieving a fivefold increase in productivity and human fulfillment in the process.

Admitting that science and religion have been considered contradictory, mainly because of the conflict between modern science and Christianity, especially concerning the authority of the church, Logunov and Ikeda agree that science and religions can play complementary roles. Ikeda, introducing Buddhist epistemology, shows that there is a remarkable similarity in modern science and the Buddhist philosophy on how to look at the universe and life. Fine paintings transcend what is visible to the eye. More than by their technical skill I am astounded by artists' power to go beyond a subject's exterior appearance to observe something deeper.... Without being obsessed by the constantly changing phenomenal world, the true artist directs his gaze to the immutable world within and opens the way toward infinity. It is in this that I sense a deep bond between art and religion." Chinese (Traditional), English, French, German, Hungarian, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese

How does jazz influence our lives? And what do jazz and Buddhism have in common? In this volume of free-spirited, improvisational conversations, two of the world's leading jazz superstars, Herbie Hancock and Wayne Shorter (1933-2023), and Daisaku Ikeda demonstrate the indomitable way of life that jazz and Buddhism demonstrate. They draw on the history of jazz and how, with its roots in the pain and suffering of the black experience, jazz not only expressed people's sufferings but also transformed them, while bringing people joy and pleasure. The authors agree that Buddhism also gives people the hope and courage with which to overcome suffering and enjoy life. Through their own experiences, Hancock and Shorter share the idea that Buddhist principles such as "turning poison into medicine" have much in common with the creative process of jazz. This volume also looks back upon the authors' first encounter in the 1970s and constitutes a compilation of their exchange that spans over four decades.

The Soka Gakkai is one of the most dynamic religious organizations in the world today, and The Human Revolution is one of its most important and fascinating documents. Based on Nichiren Buddhism, the Soka Gakkai has some 10 million members in Japan alone, which gives it a significant role to play in Japanese society. The Human Revolution is a novelized account of the phenomenal postwar growth of the Soka Gakkai and an informal biography of the man behind it, Josei Toda, who served as the organization's second president. Ikeda, Toda's successor and now the president of Soka Gakkai International, is also a prolific author. More than the story of a great religious teacher, this is the story of how a revolutionary change in a single man helped the lives of countless people by giving them hope, and how that change set forth a religious revolution that has been continuing ever since. The original Japanese series consists of twelve volumes. Together they cover the Soka Gakkai's progress from its rebirth after the end of World War II in 1945 until 1960.

The five poems included here were written by Ikeda during the turbulent two-year period that includes the September 11 attacks and the subsequent US retaliation in Afghanistan. His passionate appeal for an end to violence, war and conflict pervade these poems. Based on his belief that ordinary people are the greatest beings of all, he urges those in power to listen to the voices of the people. He calls upon us:

Never believe that the greatest, most irresistible force is the power of the state. For the energy of the soul, the might of the human spirit, is an even greater force, the most magnificent power of all. Let us form in our hearts the resolute will to realize peace, summoning a force sublime and unsurpassed. This is the goal and conclusion sought by all of humanity's wisdom and learning over ages.

Songs from My Heart

English, Filipino, French, Japanese, Malay, Mongolian, Portuguese, Spanish, Thai

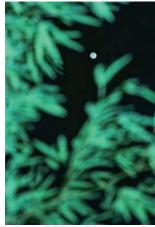

Ikeda, a poet laureate, has produced a huge body of poetry. In his poems, readers will find genuine feelings and impressions of the real life of a man "who strives at all times to be an honest human being." Songs from My Heart is a compilation of Ikeda's poems, in which he expresses reflections and ideas that sprang from his daily activities in such a straight-forward manner that it could be thought of as his personal diary. Poems here honor youth, nature and the common people. In one of his poems, he writes:

Young man! this human shout of joy, so eloquent, so strong, so beautiful in the end and always you must salute it gravely, for in it alone are the principles, the sole human likeness of the revolutionary expression which you would fashion.

APPENDIX P71

Books for Young People

"It is my abiding hope that preschoolers and schoolchildren be afforded every opportunity to be exposed to reading at home as well as in school. While there is much children gain from reading on their own, the experience is further enriched when parents and teachers read aloud to them.

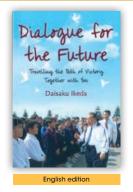

"Children sense the warmth of words in the voices of their parents and teachers, and their imagination is challenged to capture a story's landscapes and dramatic scenes. The modulations of the reader's voice help children experience and develop a range of emotions, from sadness to joy. As parents and teachers read aloud, they can watch the children's facial expressions and choose to change their tone or pause to hear a child's thoughts.

"Through these encounters, a relationship of mutual trust steadily begins to take shape."

Review

"As in The Snow Country Prince, their previous collaboration, Ikeda and Wildsmith present a tender story about the rewards of kindness. Ikeda's quiet text is infused with the innocence and curiosity embodied in his child protagonists; his message is fundamental without being didactic."

Illustrated by Brian Wildsmith

Little Mariko and her brother Kazuo live in a fishing village in Snow Country. One year, when the winter arrives colder than ever, Mariko and Kazuo feed swans struggling to find food and take care of an injured swan. As the bird regains its strength, the children draw pictures of it to encourage their sick father, who is being treated at a distant hospital. Under the gentle care of Mariko and Kazuo, the swan gets stronger, and so does their father. When the swan is finally able to fly and the winter is over, their father, too, recovers and the family is united again. With the help of the Snow Country Prince, Mariko and Kazuo learn not to give up, even during the hard winter. Illustrations painted by Brian Wildsmith add to the wonder of this story.

The children carried the injured swan and gently placed it in the water. It lifted its head hopefully towards the sky and flapped its wings.

"Yes, you can do it too! You can!" cried Mariko encouragingly. "Keep trying! Don't give up!"

"No, whatever happens, don't give up!" said Kazuo. The words seemed to have been waiting in his heart.
